Introduction

With the advent of blockchain technology it has come to an understanding that a tamper proof ledger and secure transactions is the way to conduct business in the future. Blockchain technology is a specific type of database that stores data in blocks that is chained together permanently in chronological order, is decentralized, immutable and visible for everyone to inspect.

The use of this technology will see businesses being able to acquire start up capital to launch their innovations onto the community bringing investors to their platform. Although revolutionary, bad actors in the cryptocurrency sphere perform malicious actions that take advantage of investors losing their trust in the process. Enter JellyMoonLight, a new cryptocurrency token used to reward community members for successfully identifying scams and rugpulls leaving negative perceptions to investors all over.

Introduction

In the decentralized Finance (DeFi) and crypto spheres, getting rug pulled means that the liquidity is removed from a Decentralized Exchange (DEX) liquidity pool. The removal of the liquidity results in a sell off as other liquidity provider, traders and holders panic that no liquidity is available for trading. Once all the liquidity has been removed, the token becomes worthless and cannot be traded off or sold, leaving holders with lost funds, deceit for the crypto markets and a bitter experience. Utilizing blockchain technology, JellyMoonLight is a token that uses algorithm to safely create scam proof transactions, that implement anti-whale algorithms preventing large sell off of any wallet. The use of blockchain technology and the services that come with the technology should be trusted and verified to prevent loss of funds and mental health wellbeing.
